Atrial flutter ablation is performed in the hospital. You'll receive a medication called a sedative that helps you relax. Once the sedative takes effect, a small area near a vein in your groin or neck is numbed and catheters are inserted into the vein. Your doctor carefully guides the catheters through the vein and into your heart.

Ablation success is lower than in typical flutter and the recurrence rate is higher, especially in circuits located in the paraseptal areas. 24,132–134 On the other hand, CTI-dependent flutter is a frequent finding in patients with atrial tachycardia and surgical or ablation scars. 24 In cases with multiple MRT circuits, CTI ablation may make ablation success easier by stabilising the atypical MRT circuit and thus making mapping and ablation possible. In cases of atypical MRT of the RA ...
