The Institutionalization Of Europe

In 1950, a European political space existed, if only as a very primitive site of international governance. Now, at the beginning of the twenty-first century, the European Union governs in an ever-growing number of policy domains.

In the political economy of European welfare states, both the Bismarckian and Beveridgean types of pension systems were used for similar purposes, such as for the institutionalization of retirement and the management of the labor market. In many ways, however, their institutional patterns remained distinct, and there was further differentiation as the Scandinavian countries parted ways with the Anglo-Saxon ones.
